Facts to Note:

October 25 was first proclaimed Larry Itliong Day in California in 2015 California Governor Jerry Brown proclaimed it a day to celebrate the life and legacy of trailblazing Filipino American labor leader and civil rights activist Larry Itliong.

Larry Itliong was a Filipino American labor organizer and civil rights activists. He was one of the founders of the United Farm Workers, which orchestrated the 1965-66 Delano Grape Strike and boycott.

Itliong's poor experience as a farm laborer led him to become an activist and organizer. Immigrating to the U.S. in 1929 with hopes of becoming a lawyer, Itliong ended up as a West Coast farm laborer. He saw how badly laborers were treated and recognized the power they could gain by working together.

Itliong was a leader in unionized farm work. In 1956 Larry Itliong formed the Filipino Farm Labor Union, and by 1959 he led the Agricultural Workers Organizing Committee (AWOC), which was multi-ethnic, but largely Filipino.

In an important cross-racial collaboration, Itliong worked with Cesar Chavez and Dolores Huerta to demand farm workers' rights and form the United Farm Workers.

Itliong led members of the Agricultural Workers Organizing Committee (AWOC) into a grape strike but soon realized that Mexican-American farm workers could easily break the strike, leaving it pointless. So, Itliong convinced Cesar Chavez and Dolores Huerta, leaders of the National Farm Workers Association (NFWA) to join forces, creating the Delano Grape Strike. Chavez conceded. The two groups then merged, creating the United Farm Workers, a union of farm workers that still stands today. (The History Channel)
